Your Patient Story – Beyond the Image

Your story is unique, important and can change others’ lives.

Have you, a friend or a loved one experienced excellent patient care from someone in the radiology community such as a radiologist, radiology technologist, medical physicist or radiation oncologist? Has RadiologyInfo.org provided you with vital information that helped to ease your concerns and prepare you for a radiology procedure?

Here's your opportunity to share your story about how radiology has positively influenced your life. Sharing your story may help others going through a similar situation overcome their fears and concerns and ultimately become more confident about the radiology procedure or exam they will undergo. Help others better understand the positive role radiology has played in your life and healthcare.

Please note
Patient stories are unique and represent individual experiences. All patient story submissions and reports are solely provided by the patient, caregiver or guardian. Treatment outcomes may differ and may not be representative of all instances. Any hospital, medical facility and/or doctor mention does not imply endorsement by RadiologyInfo.org.

Patient stories that are selected and included on RadiologyInfo.org will be for the purpose of showcasing the unique and vital role of radiologists and RadiologyInfo.org in healthcare. Patients, caregivers or guardians who share a story understand that it may not be included on RadiologyInfo.org. In addition, patients, caregivers and guardians understand that RadiologyInfo.org reserves the right to edit final submission for clarity and space.

RadiologyInfo.org is not a medical facility. Please contact your physician with specific medical questions or for a referral to a radiologist or other physician. To locate a medical imaging or radiation oncology provider in your community, you can search the ACR-accredited facilities database.
